It is important to begin editing with the simplest tools to get your feet wet. You can subsequently advance to more powerful tools and more powerful functions by first mastering the basics, and then applying that knowledge to more complicated projects. When you open Photoshop from the menu bar at the top of the screen, you're taken to the Camera icon. You can zoom in and out using the + and - keys, and the number pad on your keyboard, and press TAB to activate the zoom tool. You can also use the scroll wheel on your mouse. Press Escape or click the X in the corner of the image for the Quick Selection tool. You can click on the image to select a section of it, or Shift-click to select an area that is slightly larger than the area you want to work on. The Quick Selection tool can also be enabled by Shift-clicking on the tool icon. The white outline corresponds to the selection area. The white (outline) and the surrounding area will be your working area. When you are using Quick Selection, the Tool options will change. Press Shift-T to activate the Free Transform tool. This tool can create new dimensions. You can change the width and height using the Size tool. Click the Size tool and then change the width and height of the image in either direction using the up/down or left/right arrows. The Command Menu's Size menu allows you to set the new size in pixels, to calculate the percentage of the current size, or to convert the size to one of the standard units. You can then drag the layer handles to reposition the image. You can resize an object by using the Global menu's Align menu. The menu's Arrange menu allows you to rotate and flip the image. You can press Ctrl+T to access the Free Transform tool and then use it to transform the image in some way. The Free Transform tool can also be enabled by Shift-clicking on the tool icon. You can use the Object menu's Transform options to make the image do something very specific. You can use the Undo command to undo a command or action. Use the layers

Surface properties of silver- and gold-containing nanotubes. Nanotube-based electrodes have gained considerable attention because of their unique electrical properties. The realization of such nanostructures with controlled surface chemistry has become a prominent topic of study in the past decade, and mostly pore-confined nanoparticles in organic and inorganic materials have been described. In this work we report the fabrication of homogeneous carbon-supported silver and gold nanoparticles with controlled size and arrangement in multiple zigzag or fullerene-type single-wall nanotubes (SWNTs) with no pores in their interior. The composite electrodes were fabricated by loading the metal particles on the inside surface of SWNTs. Electrochemical techniques were used to probe the electronic properties of the fabricated composite electrode. The fabrication and characterization of the silver- and gold-containing electrodes showed that the electrical properties of the composite electrodes depended significantly on the SWNT structure, the presence of surface Ag and Au nanoparticles in the SWNT, and the relative amount of Ag and Au in the composite.Q: How to run code on a page load in asp.net mvc? I want to run code on a page load. I have a controller called HomeController which holds all the code to load data from another table, i have a load module which is the page where all the data will load, i have this actionmethod below which holds all the code to load data and show it. public ActionResult Index() { //set up data //using objectdatacontext List arrayList = new List(); using(objectdatacontext dc = new objectdatacontext()) { arrayList = dc.fetchdata().ToList(); } return View(arrayList); } how do i make the data from the controller show up on the screen on a page load? A: I would suggest that you use jQuery to achieve what you want - The Model Loading Code in jQuery article on CodeProject is a good example of what you would need. You can also use jQuery's $.ajax() function to make a request to your Controller method. The activist groups use the measure to to encourage banks not to speculate on the increases in oil prices
